

History Curriculum

- Causation and Consequence
- Change and Continuity
- Historical Interpretations or Source Analysis
- Historical Significance
- Similarity and Difference

Building on Key Stage 2

- Students' progress in their understanding of second-order concepts, drawing a distinction between the first 5 (cause, consequence, change and continuity, similarity and difference, and historical significance) and the last 2 (sources and evidence and historical interpretations).
- The former are used to classify types of historical argument taught in lessons; the latter focus more on the processes by which evidence is established, and accounts are constructed.
- There continues to be a focus on developing student's ability to write extended responses and analyse different interpretations of the past.
